103. This Act is called the National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act, 2003, and takes effect on a date determined by the President by proclamation in the Gazette.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT: BIODIVERSITY BILL, 2003

1. GENERAL BACKGROUND

Biodiversity in South Africa is currently regulated by means of a plethora of fragmented and incomplete legislation mainly at provincial level but in some sectors also nationally. Absence of national legislation leads to difficulties in controlling the sustainable use of biological resources. In order to comply with section 24 of the Constitution, national legislation is required to regulate the sustainable use of biological resources, and the National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Bill provides for the consolidation of different pieces of biodiversity legislation, particularly with regard to aspects of coordination of international obligations and the distribution of benefits derived from indigenous biological resources.

The Bill also seeks to give effect to the management policy laid down in the White Paper on Environmental Management approved by Cabinet. The most important feature of the White Paper on Environmental Management is its emphasis on the principle of co-operative governance to ensure that the environmental rights in the Constitution are protected and fulfilled. The Bill employs a number of instruments to promote and give effect to co-operative governance as envisaged in section 41(2) of the Constitution.

The role of the Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism as lead agent in exercising Government's custodianship of biodiversity must be effective and compatible with constitutional allocation of powers.

Sectoral integration at national level

The provisions of the Bill seek to avoid duplication of functions and obligated commitments existing in different national government sectors, for example:

- The concept of multiple competent authorities for the same function provides the framework for cross-sectoral devolution of regulatory functions while retaining existing sectoral regulatory functions.
- An integrated permit system allows for existing permits issued by other competent authorities to satisfy the permitting requirements of the Bill rather than setting in place an additional permit system for the same purpose.
- Integrating sectoral conservation initiatives into a single national objective (e.g. species protection) whilst retaining the existing status quo with regard to sectoral responsibilities and activities (e.g. species listing).

2. OBJECTS OF BILL

Chapter 1 of the Bill defines the specific terminology used, sets out the objectives of the Bill and allows for the setting of norms and standards to achieve these objectives. It further sets the framework for application of the Bill in relation to the National Environmental Management Act, other legislation and relevant multilateral environmental agreements.

Chapter 2 establishes the South African National Biodiversity Institute (SANBI), replacing the current National Botanical Institute. It provides criteria for selection and appointment of a governing board, defines the functions and powers of the governing board and the SANBI, and contains provisions on general administration, including financial matters.

Chapter 3 sets out a framework for planning the conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity within a broader framework of planning for sustainable development. It provides for the development, monitoring and review of a national biodiversity framework, which will be a National Biodiversity Strategy and Action Plan (NBSAP) giving effect to the objectives of the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD). The preparation of bioregional conservation plans, that embody the ecosystem approach of conservation in the context of climatic and geographical characteristics and interaction, is provided for as well as other conservation plans addressing specific components of biodiversity requiring special conservation attention.

Chapter 4 contains provisions for the protection of rare or threatened species, and species protected under international agreements, as well as threatened ecosystems, setting out the listing of species and ecosystems on the basis of their national or international conservation status and regulating the activities, including trade, that may involve such listed species and ecosystems. A scientific authority for this purpose is established and its functions are set out. Provision is made for regulations to facilitate the objectives of this chapter.

Chapter 5 provides for the management of alien and invasive species through the control of their introduction and spread, as well as the control or eradication of those already established. The chapter establishes a duty of care on persons who carry out activities with alien and invasive species, or who own land on which invasive species occur. It further establishes obligations for the control and eradication of invasive species and provides for invasive species control plans and regular reporting on invasive species status and efficacy of control measures.

Chapter 6 provides for the regulation of bioprospecting of genetic material derived from indigenous biological resources, and provisions for the fair and equitable sharing of benefits arising from bioprospecting of genetic material derived from indigenous biological resources are set out in the chapter. These provisions require bioprospecting permit holders to enter into benefit-sharing agreements with relevant owners of rights in the resources and to acquire material transfer agreements as proof of access to resources following consent of the holders of rights to the indigenous resources. The chapter also provides for the protection of indigenous biological resources through listing of such. A bioprospecting trust fund is created for receipt and disbursement of all fees.

Chapter 7 provides for regulation of activities relating to components of biodiversity, achieved by means of a permitting system. Activities regulated by permits are those involving species listed as threatened or protected as well as alien or invasive species. The permitting system will be fully integrated with other permitting systems at national (e.g. National Department of Agriculture) or provincial level to avoid duplication.

Chapter 8 establishes administrative arrangements for the implementation of the Act and enables the Minister to make regulations relating to certain sections of the Act or any matter in order to facilitate its implementation. Specific areas where the Minister may make regulations are national norms and standards; protection and utilisation of species and ecosystems; implementation of international agreements; alien and invasive species; bioprospecting and permits. This chapter also compels the Minister to follow a consultative and public participation process in exercising powers under the Act.

Chapter 9 provides for penalties and offences and Chapter 10 repeals the Forest Act, 1984 (Act No. 122 of 1984), and provide for a savings clause and legality to bioprospecting agreements concluded before the Act takes effect.

3. FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS FOR STATE

A detailed costing of the Bill has been undertaken. The implementation of the Bill will have moderate financial implications for provinces, the Department and the National Biodiversity Institute. These implications need to be set off against the increased revenue which will accrue from the permitting, trade in endangered species and bioprospecting revenues envisaged in the Bill. The provisions of the Bill will be phased in over a period of five years. It is anticipated that the net increase in the MTEF allocation to biodiversity within the Department will be R20 million over the MTEF period. This increase can be accommodated within the Department's MTEF.

4. IMPLICATIONS FOR PROVINCES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The concurrency of environmental functions is recognised in the Bill through the provision of certain clauses that enable the MECs for environmental affairs, where necessary, to perform certain duties including the following:

- Determination of a geographic region as a bioregion and the publishing as well as review and amendment of such a bioregional plan.

- Publishing and updating of provincial lists of different categories of species and ecosystems needing protection.
- If designated as competent authorities for the control and management of alien invasive species, provincial and local government authorities may intervene where certain provisions under the alien and invasive species chapter of the Act have been contravened. Municipalities can also obtain assistance from SANBI in this regard upon the request of the Minister.
- If designated issuing authorities for bioprospecting provisions, provinces may ensure that benefit-sharing agreements concluded between the applicants and the other parties are fair and equitable.

5. OTHER DEPARTMENTS/BODIES CONSULTED

The draft Bill was published in terms of section 154 of the Constitution in Government Gazette No. 24311 of 24 January 2003 for public comment. Extensive consultation took place through public workshops, discussions with government and departments, and written submissions were received from stakeholders and the general public. Below is the list of stakeholders consulted:

- Provincial departments
- National Department of Agriculture
- Department of Land Affairs
- Department of Water Affairs and Forestry
- National Botanical Institute
- Research councils
- SALGA

During the time when the Bill was open for comments, workshops were held by DEAT, which were divided into “Civil Society” workshops and “National and Provincial Authorities/Government” workshops. Civil Society workshops were held in Cape Town (20 February 2003), Johannesburg (10 February 2003) and in Durban (10 and 11 February 2003). “Contact Trust” facilitated the Civil Society workshops and their input is appreciated and acknowledged by DEAT.

The Government authority workshops were held in Pretoria and in East London. Provincial representatives attended a workshop in Pretoria (6 February 2003) and in East London (20 February 2003) and national department representatives attended a workshop in Pretoria (7 February 2003). Written comments include comments that were e-mailed, faxed and mailed to the Department.

6. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

The State Law Advisers and the Department of Environmental Affairs are of the opinion that the Bill should be dealt with in accordance with the procedure established by section 76 of the Constitution since “environment” is a functional area listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution.
